5 Ways to Legally Reduce Your Taxes by Moving to Cayman

The Cayman Islands charges 0% income, corporate, and capital gains tax. Here's how relocating founders actually capture that benefit — legally, and without triggering a mess back home.

1 Sever state tax residency the right way

If you're a U.S. citizen leaving a high-tax state, properly establishing bona fide non-residency can eliminate state income tax entirely — but sloppy documentation is the #1 reason people get challenged.

2 Structure a Cayman entity around your actual income

A Cayman Exempted Company pays 0% corporate tax, but how you structure ownership, timing of distributions, and where work is actually performed all affect what you keep.

3 Use the Foreign Earned Income Exclusion (U.S. citizens)

Qualifying Americans living abroad can exclude a meaningful portion of earned income from federal tax each year — on top of Cayman's own 0% rate. It has to be claimed and documented correctly.

4 Time your departure around your home country's exit rules

Canada's departure tax, the UK's Statutory Residence Test, and various exit-year rules all hinge on timing. Leaving on the wrong date can cost you a full extra year of home-country tax.

5 Keep genuine, provable Cayman substance

Tax authorities everywhere are looking for 'paper only' moves. Real presence — real days on-island, a real address, real local ties — is what protects every strategy above.
