The Cayman Insider List: 5 People You Need to Know

A successful move to Cayman isn't a solo project. Here are the five roles you'll need in your corner — and why who you pick matters as much as what you know.

1 An immigration attorney who knows the current residency rules

Residency categories and requirements shift. You want someone who files these applications regularly, not once a year.

2 A registered agent who treats compliance as ongoing, not one-time

Your Cayman entity's registered office and annual filings need active management — Economic Substance reporting isn't a 'set and forget' checkbox.

3 A cross-border accountant who understands both sides

You need someone fluent in both Cayman's structure and your home country's tax code — not two separate accountants who've never spoken to each other.

4 A private banker who's set up accounts for relocators before

Opening banking as a new resident with an offshore structure has its own process. The wrong introduction can add months.

5 A real estate agent who actually lives here — not just sells here

Someone who knows the island beyond listings: school districts, which neighborhoods flood, which developments have had permit issues, and who to call about literally anything else.
